CLIFF DIVE CEREMONY AT PU'U KEKA'A, BLACK ROCK

Ancient and Modern Hawaiians believe that Pu`u Keka`a is one of three `uhane lele, sacred places where souls leap from Earth into their ancestral spirit land as they transition from the living in to the netherworld. It is believed that only a person with great mana or spiritual strength, can enter that realm and return unscathed.

King Kahekili, nicknamed "The Thunderer", who ruled the islands of Maui and O`ahu for many decades and lived in Ka`anapali for most of his ruling years, proved his bravery by jumping from Pu`u Keka`a and returning to shore unharmed. A master of the ancient Hawaiian sport of lele kawa or cliff diving, he performed other legendary athletic feats by leaping from heights as high as 300 to 400 feet and plunging into the ocean and fresh water pools below in various locations around the islands. Kahekili, "King of the Spirit Leap" earned unwavering loyalty and admiration by his people; and his warriors, who personified his courage, determination and ferocity, were respected and feared throughout all of the Hawaiian Islands.

In honor of the Hawaiian royalty that once called Ka`anapali home, the nightly tradition of torch lighting and cliff diving is still honored today. Shortly before sunset each evening, a young warrior dressed in the traditional malo or loincloth, sets torches aflame around the majestic grounds surrounding the Sheraton Maui Resort & Spa. The story of King Kahekili and Pu`u Keka`a is told at The Cliff Dive Bar as the warrior journeys across the white sands of Ka`anapali Beach, lighting the torches set on the crest of Black Rock. He traces an ancient path to the tip of Pu`u Keka`a where he offers his torch and flower lei, lifting it to the sky in all four directions, paying homage to the nature, spirits and life around him. He completes his journey with a dive off Black Rock, as Kahekili once did himself centuries ago.
